

BICYCLES FOR HUMANITY

Hi Bruce,

Here is a late item for the Meeting on Thursday.

Only W.A. is doing anything like this but Ro Privett did not know about that when I called him.

Talk to you Soon!

Graeme

To whom it may concern,

How are you? I trust you are well. A quick moment of your time if I may.

Bicycles For Humanity is a worldwide, grass roots, volunteer run organisation focused on simple, sustainable empowerment in the developing world. We do this in the most transparent and practical way by sending unused donated bikes from the developed world to our partner organisations in various countries in need. It has been making a great difference to the quality of poor people's lives. I have recently been involved with B4H (myself and my company Wild Exposure) and am seeking ways that I can help – as a volunteer. On behalf of the B4H volunteers, I would like to present to you an opportunity.

We have had strong interest and support from the community around Australia who would like to donate their bike/s to such a worthy cause. The problem at this stage is arranging for 'drop off points/ centres' where the community can leave their bikes in order to be collected and transported to Sydney or Melbourne.

In light of this, we would like to ask The Mens Shed whether they may consider utilizing their centres for possible drop off points? Then, myself and fellow volunteers would arrange for pickups from these locations and transport to the city for freighting to third world countries. In the past, we have ran our resources thin to the ground by driving all over the state to pick up bikes from single households and businesses and so forth. This takes up too much precious time, especially as volunteers and so you can clearly see our desire for allocated collection centres across the state.

If you could please give this some thought and let me know whether you are able to assist us in our plight to make a difference. We approach The Mens Shed because we recognize the integrity and the great work that the you do. Please visit our website www.bicyclesforhumanity.com for more information.

Thanks for your time & I look forward to your response.

Regards

Ro Privett
